

Fox Crossing Farm consists of 46 +/- acres located in the Historic Dark Corners area of Upstate South Carolina. The farm is in what is now the Tryon Hounds Hunt Country and was originally at the center of the Greenville County Hounds Hunt Country founded and established by Gordon Wright. Located on the GENTS trail system it offers miles of private landowner trails.

The unique residence was assembled in 1987, compiled from two older homes that were moved to the site and reassembled as one. The dining room, guest room and kitchen of the residence was the original "Moon House" circa 1854. What is now the kitchen was a bedroom connected by a "dog trot" to the Moon house. The remainder of the Moon House has been made into the dining room and guest suite. The living room, master bedroom and upstairs bedroom and bath were the historic "Campbell House" circa 1832 which was moved from across the street. The home retains the warmth and charm from the hand hewn tongue and groove boards for the walls and random width pine floors throughout. In 1998 the exterior of the residence was renovated adding plywood sheathing, insulation, a new roof, hardy board siding, the pool and the large deck.

A second three bedroom guest / trainer house with a wrap around porch is situated to provide complete privacy between the two homes.

Foyer with stone fireplace.
